CAMPAINING IN THE DESERT

Some Recollections of a Red Deer Man Who Fought in Egypt and the Desert During the Late War

The Welsh or 53rd Division of the British Expeditionary Force, after the evacuation of Gallipoli, was sent in the early part of 1915 to the western borders of Egypt to deal with the rebellion of the Senussi Arabs. This desert before attempting this, as a religious tie, took advantage of the outbreak of the Great War to raise a rebellion of their own against the authority of the Egyptian government and its British protectors. Under ordinary circumstances the rising would not have been formidable, but with all the strength of Britain necessarily directed against Germany and her allies it was a troublesome diversion. It could not be ignored, for the Egyptian troops were quite unreliable and Egypt and the Suez Canal were vital to the British communication with India, Australia and New Zealand. The Senussi had therefore to be dealt with.

It was not a very easy task to deal with them, with their own against the British. Like most savage races they were extremely mobile in the desert. They were a cunning and crafty race, and they were very hard to catch. They were very mobile in the desert, and they were very hard to catch. They were very mobile in the desert, and they were very hard to catch.

AN OLD SONG
Edward Fitzgerald
'Tis a dull sight
To see the year dying,
When winter winds
Set the yellow woods sighing:
Sighing, O sighing!
When such a time cometh
Do I dream
Of a bright fire!
O, pile a bright fire!

WARRIOR AGAINST INSECTS
It is estimated that from 10 to 25 per cent of all crop grown in Canada is lost by the ravages of insects and that the annual loss in value reaches the enormous total of over one hundred million dollars. The crusade against this devastation, which is carried on by officers of the Dominion Entomological Branch at Ottawa and in various provinces, is thus of a herculean character. As circumstances warrant it whole districts are brought under quarantine to prevent the pest in particular localities being shipped out on products upon which they prey. Trenches miles in length have been dug in the soil, and the destructive army worms; aeroplanes have been used to survey areas infected with the grasshopper and locusts. The crusade is being carried on by officers of the Dominion Entomological Branch at Ottawa and in various provinces, is thus of a herculean character. As circumstances warrant it whole districts are brought under quarantine to prevent the pest in particular localities being shipped out on products upon which they prey.

It was an old story that the clear, starlit nights of the desert lend themselves to the use of the stars for direction in night marching, but it was necessary to have some slight knowledge of the stars and their movements before attempting this, as one brigade, major found to his cost, the night march was in contemplation, and the worthy officer ordered direction to be taken on a certain bright heavenly body. The column moved off but it failed to reach its destination in the night. It marched on the edge of a swampy lake. It was certain that such a swamp had not been contemplated in the intended route and the column was therefore halted and ordered to lie down till the dawn. The men, tired with a long march which they had quickly discovered to be perfectly useless through error of direction, were unable to sleep, and to the cold and an unhappy day found them invoking blessings and other things on the heads of the men who had compelled them to march a steadily wheeling planet, which over the heads of the men, who were in the trackless sands and finally deposited them far out of their road on the edge of a swampy lake. There is a lesson in calmness of mind and philosophy to be drawn from the fact that one little star of British origin, shining steadily in the night sky, was a small ravine a group of Indian Sikhs engaged in an unbroken and steady combat of their long black bows.

These night marches did occasionally produce some results, but the form of the capture of a few wandering Arabs who came drifting into the camp was a small order of the day. The method of defence adopted against the Senussi by the British was the hours of 2 or 3 or 4, and the British communication with India, Australia and New Zealand. The Senussi had therefore to be dealt with.

ALBERTA RED CROSS ANNUAL CAMPAIGN

The annual campaign for funds for the Red Cross is now on. Canadian Red Cross takes place this month through the province. On October 31 the day will be known as Red Cross Day or Health Day.
A special feature this year is the system of grain donations by which gifts of grain in lieu of cash are being solicited from the farmers. All elevator companies have been instructed by the Western Grain Dealers' Association to accept donations of grain and to forward cheques to provincial headquarters.
This grain campaign will in no way interfere with the regular Red Cross campaign which is a direct appeal for contributions and memberships.
It is hoped that all country towns and districts will plan to have a Red Cross entertainment or dance some time during October, preferably October 31, and to make it as attractive as possible for the community.
Lantern lectures and campaign literature are well in hand. Receipt books and entertainment posters are available at head office on receipt of your order. If desired, head office speakers at Calgary will arrange to address meetings on behalf of the Red Cross drive.

IDLE THOUGHTS OF A BUSY FARMER

In the spring the newspapers begin telling the eastern public that the west has enough moisture in the soil to insure that year's crop without any additional precipitation. "Eventually, why not now?" we would humbly suggest that they begin now to assure the easterners that the moisture in the ground is already sufficient to insure bumper crops in 1926 and 1927; that if the present rate of precipitation continues in two weeks more enough moisture will be on hand to care for the 1928 and 1929 crops. This will allow them plenty of time to formulate reasons for the land drying out before the 1926 crop is harvested.
We do not know what the common or garden layman thinks about it but we should surprise that by now the hay-folks must have come to the conclusion that Mr. Mackenzie King is a young man of great promise but little performance. Personally, we always have a feeling that Mr. Mackenzie King was the kind of a politician who is all wind and froth.

MANY TURKEYS ARE BEING RAISED IN THE PEACE DISTRICT

Encouraged by the output in eastern Canada for the turkey crop, Alberta farmers are rapidly increasing their output. According to Mr. J. R. Higgins, of the poultry division of the Live Stock Branch, who has recently visited the district as far north as Peace River, the present has been a very favorable one for turkey raising and that shipments east will be heavier than in the past. Three thousand turkeys for the Vahlha district alone is estimated at between three and four thousand birds and it is thought that there should be a total output in excess of one hundred thousand pounds of dressed turkeys shipped from Grande Prairie, Alberta. The hot air passing through the breeders from this section have shipped their birds live but this method involves the expense of shipping and under way to organize community turkey kills this year.
Mr. Higgins states that the number of turkey raisers in the Peace River district are showing increasing interest in the improvement of their stock and that many farmers made inquiries concerning the purchase of good fobblers.

THE WESTERN GENERAL PROBLEM

The award of the Board of Public Utilities in the Western General Electric Company arbitration seems to be regarded by both parties to the arbitration as a satisfactory one. The next step to be taken is to put the matter before the people of the city for their decision. The City Council at its last meeting discussed the question at length and took what was considered to be a very sound view, namely, that before the people are asked to vote on any purchase by the council should not put themselves in the position of being able to give the people a definite plan of operation of the undertaking and to show them just what the financial effect of taking it over is likely to be. The idea of getting the mayor to go to Calgary and have an interview with Mr. Brown, the expert engineer who gave evidence on the hearing of the case, was a good one. He knows the whole situation here thoroughly and ought to be able to give the council full advice as to the possibilities of the situation. It was also wise to plan to bring Mr. Brown to Red Deer to be present at a public meeting and answer any of the questions which ratepayers will naturally want to ask. Probably almost the only consideration which will weigh with the ratepayers is whether the purchase of the Western General will mean increase of taxation or not. If it will, then from recent experience it seems unlikely that the bylaw for purchase will be passed. Reduction of rates can only come when it has been clearly demonstrated that the city can manage the undertaking at its present rates with a profit. The council took the wholly businesslike view that these are matters on which they are not qualified to give a reliable opinion. Hence their decision to be guided by an expert who knows the position. Until the plan proposed is put before the public, judgment about the whole proposal ought to be suspended, and an open mind kept with regard to it. One thing, however, should be realized. If the ratepayers decide against purchase on the terms fixed by the board, there will be no ground for complaint hereafter against the company as to rates and such matters, for both the company and the governing authorities will be able to say that the ratepayers had the chance to buy at a fair price and did not take it.

CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATURE AND POLITICAL ORGANIZATION

The withdrawal of Dr. Wagner, the nominee of the Conservative convention, has put the Conservatives of this constituency in a very difficult position. The election is only three weeks off and no work has been done toward putting the views of the party before the electors. The Progressives, who, under any circumstances, would have taxed to the utmost the capacity of any Conservative candidate to beat him. Under present circumstances any Conservative nominee must begin with a heavy handicap. The situation has its lessons and not for the Conservatives only. This election was not sprung on the country suddenly or without warning. It was anticipated confidently months ago. Yet, so far as is known, no steps were taken to either prepare the party or to get the Conservatives or Liberals to pick their candidates, ascertain whether they were willing to stand, find out just what their views on public questions were and plan an organization to put those views before the public. All over the country men have been nominated at conventions almost haphazard. In some cases it has not been a question of who is the man best fitted to carry on the business of the country if elected to put the party's views most effectively before the people, but who on earth can we get to make some sort of a run. That is rather a melancholy spectacle, and in face of it there cannot be very much ground for surprise that in some cases the representative chosen is not a man of the best type of men that the country can produce. The business of government and legislation is not one to be entrusted to casual political amateurs, whose only qualifications are an easy popularity and an ability to foot a bill for election expenses. Men chosen on those grounds are apt to produce inefficient legislation and incompetent administration. It has been pointed out before in these columns that the men who are invested with the supremely important task of governing the country and wielding great power over both the people and the material resources of the country are to be selected without any real qualification or preparation for their work. Of course, Canada is nothing like alone in this position. It is one of the common features of democracy, and it accounts for the fact that democracy pays for its attainment of pleasant equality by a high level of taxation and a continual atmosphere of party friction. The party friction has its values in that it puts the governing party on its mettle and lessens, though it certainly does not prevent, the constant attitude of unrestrained bureaucracy. Is there any reason why candidates for parliament should not be asked to pass some sort of an examination in history and economics before they are allowed to be nominated? If that is an unattainable ideal, is there any reason why parties should not pick their candidates a long time ahead and give them the chance of studying the political situation and the questions which are of importance to the country, so that when the election actually comes they can discuss those questions with real authority? In the present election in this constituency at any rate the best organized party is almost certainly the Progressives. For Farmers' party, and their advantage in this respect is not entirely due to the fact that the sitting member belongs to their party. If they reap the reward of this superiority, it is possible to imagine the Progressives in a quiet grin of satisfaction at having taught the supposedly more efficient townsmen a lesson in businesslike organization and foresight. It is to be hoped that the Conservatives at any rate will take the lesson to heart and not allow themselves to be again caught napping in this fashion. Apart from any question of party advantage it is not in the public interest that it should happen.

THE STRUGGLE IN MOROCCO

From the reports that are being published in the daily press it seems that the French are slowly but methodically breaking down the resistance of the Rif in Morocco and that the end is only a question of time. Winter with its rains and mud may save Abd-el-Krim and his men for a time, but the weight of resistance in men, money and equipment is so heavily against them that, if the French persist in their effort, the Rif will sooner or later be driven to submit, as the greater part of Morocco has already done. The Spanish war in the Rif is not a question of time to be very important. They may take the attention of some of the Rif forces but it is between French and Rifis that the real struggle is being fought out. For France victory is almost a matter of time. It is hardly possible for her to indulge any tendency toward generous leniency with such an enemy as Abd-el-Krim. If she fails to break him the effect on her whole position in Morocco and Northern Africa will be incalculable. As an invincible military power she can count on at least the tacit loyalty of her African subjects. The moment she is seen to be unable or unwilling to overcome any resistance there is liable to all over Northern Africa a wave of race and color consciousness with results which might be of dire import for France. It has to be remembered that France's empire in Northern Africa is not like that of Great Britain in other parts of that continent. Britain could lose the whole of her African possessions and except in respect of trade the loss would not really affect her. With France it is far otherwise. Africa is the reservoir from which she draws the increasing number of numerous black troops on whom she now to quite a large extent relies to defend her frontier in Europe from the menace of a reviving Germany. The struggle in Morocco is intimately bound up with the problem of a falling population in France. It is not the instinct of imperialism so much as that of self-preservation that is forcing France to incur the heavy expense of this Moroccan war for the conquest of a few square miles of land in the corner of a mountainous land in the corner of Northern Africa.

There is a certain amount of sympathy felt in English-speaking countries for the Rifis. The spectacle of a gallant army against heavy odds at ways commands admiration, and the courage of the Rifis and their leader's military skill is undoubted. Abd-el-Krim is an astute diplomatist too in his own way. He keeps up communication with European countries and encourages at least one or two English-speaking correspondents to watch the campaign with his armies, the result of which is that he gets his view point put before the public in a way that is hardly to be denied. As far as Spain is concerned, Abd-el-Krim can make out quite a good case for maintaining his independence. Spain has made a sorry mess of all her efforts at the government of other countries. She has never been able to govern her own country efficiently. She is now living under a military oligarchy, which does not seem to be in any hurry to hand over the reins to a regularly elected government. In gaining ability the Moors have only themselves to be blamed. Why, then, says Abd-el-Krim, should there be any ground whatever for Spain's claiming to govern the Rif country? That is true, though, but even as against Spain there is another side to it. It is a recent book that during it rather sensational traveller, Mr. Rosita Forbes, has given a picture of the other great Moorish leader of late years, Raisuli, who was captured by Abd-el-Krim some five months ago and died a prisoner. Raisuli allowed himself to be visited by him and dictated to her the story of his adventures life with all the candor of a Samuel Pepys. It was not a pleasing story. It revealed an extent of cruel barbarity beside which the despotism of Spain seemed to be a very mild and amiable thing. As compared with France and what she has done for Morocco so far the career of Raisuli, the French achievement in Northern Africa may not have been inspired by disinterested altruism but it has been a very fine one. Peace, prosperity, and at least a measure of justice have followed the French conquest, and the dreadful oppression and cruelty that characterized the governments of the Arabs of Algiers and the Moors of Morocco have ceased to be. Therefore, while one may retain some sympathy for the courage which Abd-el-Krim is fighting for their freedom, it is well to remember that, if they got it, the gain would be confined almost entirely to a few chieftains, while the majority of their people would be the unhappy victims of the will of under French rule or even under Spanish. It is also well to remember that about the first thing they would use their freedom for would be to attack and try to conquer their neighbors. In such a view when one reads sentimental despatches sent from Abd-el-Krim's headquarters by correspondents who either do not consider the realities or know too well what would happen to them if they failed to hearten up to an expedition for the cause of the gallant barbarian whose hospitality they are for the moment enjoying.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

RESIGNATION OF PRINCIPAL C. D. LOCKE

The regular meeting of the School Board was held on Monday evening, October 6, at 8 o'clock. The chairman, W. E. Payne, K.C., presided. Present: Messrs. C. D. Locke, Secretary and Principals Broughton, Pamelly and Principals Locke and Welch. Miss Gertrude Smith wrote resigning her position on the staff of the Public School. The board passed a resolution accepting the resignation with regret. It was decided to advertise for a new teacher to take Miss Smith's place. The Calgary Board wrote to a resolution passed by them to allow the charging of higher fees for non-resident High School pupils. They asked the Red Deer board to consider the matter with a view to its being brought up to the school trustees. The Calgary board stated that they had no decided policy in the matter. The board of trustees of the Red Deer School was satisfactory in quality. Miss Bryson, of the Public School staff, wrote with respect to the assembly hall as a classroom. Dear Mr. Pamelly: Having been in charge for several months of the classes in the assembly hall and feeling that it might be in use for a much longer period, I beg leave to call the attention of the board to the serious condition under which the children are placed.

There is practically no natural light in this room and the pupils are compelled to do all their work by artificial light. While the lighting facilities are a great improvement over those of last year they are still most inadequate. The chairman of the board, Mr. C. D. Locke, stated that he would call the attention of the board to the serious condition under which the children are placed.

There is no sunlight in this room and the circulation of air is very poor. The acoustic properties are also very unsatisfactory. The pupils at the back of the room find it most difficult to hear the answers of those at the front. M. MYRTLE BRYSON. This led to considerable discussion. Mr. Stephenson explained that he had asked Mr. H. J. Snell to improve the lighting conditions in the assembly hall and report as to this. Mr. Snell having arrived here a few days ago, he considered the lighting quite unsatisfactory and imposing a serious strain on the children's eyes. The best improvement that could be made from the lighting point of view would be the opening of new windows in the assembly hall. Mr. Snell stated that he had the board and that this was a matter beyond their technical knowledge. Mr. Pamelly stated that he had no objection to Mr. Snell's suggestion, which the board has taken steps to have made. The following were elected: Pretor, Harold Hugst; deputy pretor, George Cunningham; secretary, Arthur Garries; treasurer, Walter Hugst; athletes and games, John Burns. At the next meeting of the square several new members will be initiated into the secrets of Tuxis.

B.Y.P.U.

The B.Y.P.U. of the Baptist Church met at the church on Monday night with 22 members present. The president, Arthur Garries, led a short song and then turned the meeting over to Group No. 2, who had the programme for the evening, which consisted of: Scripture lesson, George Cunningham; paper, "Our Opportunities," Mrs. Jackson; paper, "A War against World," Margaret Kelly; paper, "War and Moral Standards," Grace Garries; paper, "War is Wrong in its Foundation," Harold Hugst; paper, "War is Wrong in its Results," Harold Hugst; short song service led by the group. After the programme the group closed the meeting with a fireside service, gathering in a large circle shoulder to shoulder and closing with a prayer that we might pledge ourselves to make the most of our opportunities and work for a warless world. Next week's meeting, with Bert Martin in the chair, will discuss the topic, "Men Who Wore Crowns."

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Mr. Editor: Will you kindly allow me to express my thanks for the paper, to criticize your comments on the replies of Mr. Speakman to your questions on several occasions. The present political situation or platform of either of the parties, your questions to me seem ill-fitted for this reason: They come from a Conservative through a Conservative organ as if the Conservatives were only awaiting the opportunity to express their loyalty to the empire by building a navy to work in conjunction with the British navy or at least voting a large sum of money for a parallel purpose. After very careful search I have failed to find where Mr. Meighen or any Conservative member has advocated any naval policy in any shape or form. I have found only a few opportunities to express themselves. The fact is that Mr. Meighen has as carefully avoided the question as he could when unable to avoid it altogether has criticized the policy of the Hon. Mr. Meighen. I am without committing myself to any other. You must at least admit that Mr. Speakman's answers to your questions are fully and without misapprehension. Your statements, Mr. Editor, that Mr. Meighen on several occasions definitely stated that he is in favor of a naval defence policy is disproved by Hansard.

There is no doubt that the question of naval defence in Canada just now is not a popular one and neither of the old party leaders is anxious to jeopardize their party by committing themselves to any expensive programme on those lines. They should avoid the defence question altogether or nearly altogether is not a credit to either party, although an expensive naval defence would, I believe, be a big mistake. Those of us who have some military training have taught that the best defence was to be able to take the offensive and that the best defence was to be able to take the offensive. It is in her naval affairs. But for Canada to contemplate building a navy capable of taking the offensive is out of the question, as her credit is not sufficient. For that matter, it is very doubtful if Canada could get credit sufficient to build any efficient defensive navy at the present time. Then, again, for industrial purposes, the best defence is to be able to take the offensive. In spite of your figures, Mr. Editor, the fact is that Canada would impose an unbearable burden. Your statement that Canada is a light ship is a very serious matter. As far as direct taxation goes, indirectly the people are taxed to the limit. The work of the government is to be able to take the offensive. In spite of your figures, Mr. Editor, the fact is that Canada would impose an unbearable burden. # The Red Deer Creed

I believe in Red Deer and its possibilities; and I shall do my part to make it a better place in which to live.

I believe in good government for Red Deer, and I shall assume my share of the civic responsibility that rests on the shoulders of all our citizens.

I believe in supporting local enterprises that make for community development, and shall contribute my moral support and energy to any worthy cause championed by them.

I believe in patronizing home merchants, for they are greatly responsible for our having good schools and churches, better roads, and promotion of the general welfare of this community.

I believe in making Red Deer clean and attractive, for a health atmosphere is an inducement to honest and right-thinking citizens.

I believe in boosting my home town at every possible opportunity; that thinking, talking and acting progress is the quickest and surest way to bring permanent prosperity to Red Deer--the best town in Canada--because it is MY HOME!

THE POLITICAL FOG

To the Editor of The News:

Dear Sir: With the dominion election just a few weeks away, the political fog has once again enshrouded us in its pall of darkness and mystery. The daily and weekly newspapers, from coast to coast, are placing their views on one side or the other of the issue. The leading speakers of the day are journeying throughout the land, hailing the cause of the public with tales of woe and disaster, as well as of sins of omission and commission.

To the mind of the ordinary voter, who is not bound by any special ties to any particular party, these papers and speakers present a somewhat perplexing problem. The mumble-mumble of the King government tell us that the Meighen policy will lead to the results: The Meighen spokesmen tell us practically the same of the King administration; the Progressives, Independents, Laborers and other kindred spirits in their turn tell us that neither of the old parties are any good—thereafter will follow, whichever we support.

On one thing, perhaps, they are agreed: Economy must be practiced. But when, where and by whom? The majority of the voters have to practice economy, some very rigidly, for the simple reason that they have only a stated salary or income each year, month or week, and beyond that, they have no more. It is so with our governments? Preaching economy is fine but practicing it is altogether different.

Taxation, transportation, the tariff and immigration seem to be the questions at this election—at least, so we are told by all parties. Have any of them made any feasible plans or suggestions towards remedying these defects? Are we to go and vote and trust in luck that the party returned to power will find the solution?

The budget, as on former occasions, comes in for a lot of discussion. The jugglers of one particular group make quite figures and statistics showing that we have an ideal budget; the jugglers of the other group make the same method of figures and statistics show that we are in the hole.

All this reminds one of the devout Quaker who, when asked to give "Wife, everybody's queer but thee and me, and sometimes I think thee a little queer."

As the days go on the fog thickens and the average man is perplexed. Election day will come, what will happen? Possibly some will quote that prayer of old: "Open mine eyes that I may see." Others will say: "I'll do down in their dirty something after the style of Samuel Pepys: 'Election day—Went downtown to vote; my horse, I know not. Heard the result and so to bed.'"

Yours truly,
FOGBOUND.

This letter was sent in without any name and address, and is published. Even if the writer does not wish his name published in the paper he must give it to the editor. "The News" expresses no opinion as to the merits of the suggestions made, but publishes the letter to let its readers see what some farmers think on the tariff question.

To the Editor of "The News":

Dear Sir: The addresses given by party leaders at the opening of an election campaign are important because they outline the platforms on which the support of the electorate is sought.

At Richmond Hill, Ontario, Premier King announced the federal election for October 29, and in a masterly speech outlined the policy of his party. At Winnipeg the Hon. Arthur Meighen, in an equally masterly oration, gave reasons why, in his opinion, the people should cast their votes for his party on election day.

Mr. King, in his speech, said "the three outstanding problems were transportation, immigration and the fiscal problem."

This, in brief, is Mr. King's side of the tariff question. As I interpret his remarks he would leave the tariff pretty much as it is. He does not believe in raising tariff because he holds that doing so would handicap farmers. Nor does he believe in lowering it because that action would wipe out or at least severely cripple our manufacturing industries.

Now, what has Mr. Meighen had to say on this important question? He is in favor of raising the tariff all around. In his Winnipeg speech he said: "The first tariff I would raise is on wheat. I would be the farm products tariff, and I would give the farmers of our country the same tariff on the market of this dominion that the American farmer has on the market of the United States."

Now, what is the difference in the U.S. market and ours, or what hold have they that we have not on our market?

In the United States 70 per cent of the population is rural, and the central rural. In Canada the population is about half rural and half urban. This gives the farmers of the United States two and one-third times as good a home market as Canadian farmers have.

To have as many people in our towns and cities proportionately to population as the U.S. has, we have to increase our urban population by two and one-third or 6,000,000. Farmers a market of 10,000,000 town dwellers. To attain anywhere near this, great industries must be established and goods we now import must be manufactured in our own towns, and this market must be protected for

A rumor has steadily gained ground of late and has now reached the point of being published abroad to the world that the U.S. has attained all this with a tariff twice as high as Canada's, and still the Canadian farmers ask for lower duties and carry the heavier burden of the world and they pay the highest wages in the world.

Coming to the Rex Theatre THE THUNDERING HERD

Two thousand fear-maddened buffalo stampeding across the plains. One thousand blood-thirsty Indians attacking a caravan.
Just two of the many thrills in the most spectacular Western romance since "The Covered Wagon."
"The Thundering Herd" is considered to be superior to both "The Covered Wagon" and "North of 36." It is probably the best of all the great films of early pioneering days in the West.
It will be shown at the Rex Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, October 15, 16 and 17.

The Best Furniture Co. have a fine assortment of good used heaters, which they are offering from $2.00 to $12.00 each.

NEWS OF RED DEER'S NORMALITES

The following items of news as to the Red Deer pupils attending the Normal College at Calgary may be of interest to some of our readers:
There are four hundred and sixty regular students and a waiting list of twenty-three. There are four classes of students taking first class work and five classes taking second. Besides these there is a special class taking a short course of three months.

At present there are twenty students from Red Deer. There are eight taking first and twelve taking second.

Our principal, Doctor Coffin, is a comical gentleman and makes some amusing remarks when trying to pronounce some of the student's names. There are three very interesting names which he "gets a kick" out of every day, namely, Mr. Bierwaggon, Mr. Boose and one of the headstrong names ending in "ski," which sounds like "Need-your-whisky" (absolutely unspellable).

If you want some real bargains in Furniture, Stoves, etc., you can get them at Best's, opposite the post office.

AEROPLANE ASSISTANCE IN FIGHTING INSECTS

The aeroplane has proved itself valuable in adding the ceaseless fight against insect pests. Speaking of flights that were made for scouting purposes, Dr. J. M. Swaine, in charge of the division of forest insects of the entomological branch of the department of agriculture, says that it was possible to obtain valuable information upon the areas of infestation and also to locate blocks of spruce and balsam which could be expected to suffer attack next season. These flights covered the area west and north of Lethbridge, where the outbreak was spreading, and also west and northwest of the lakes, where infestation has been acute for two years. From a height of 3,500 feet it was possible to determine types of timber and locate the blocks of spruce and balsam accurately. Information received from a few days' flying would have taken two men more than six months to acquire by ground surveys.

TO OUR READERS
We would ask each of our readers to examine the address labels on their papers in order to ascertain whether their subscription to the paper is paid up to date, and if it is not, to send in the amount owing as soon as possible. It is not easy to remind separately each person who is in arrear, and while each such may consider that the few dollars he or she owes are not worth bothering about, yet in the aggregate they may amount to a great deal and be of considerable importance to the paper. It is only fair if the paper is read that it should be paid for, and we therefore take this means of asking our readers not to overlook the matter.
